

14011 Ventura Boulevard #507 • Sherman Oaks, California 91423 • (818) 905-6419

24 November 1987

Here it is:

Enclosed is your upgrade for v2.0. Please read all of the enclosed materials so that you can be ensured you will fully understand all policies, technical support notes, author note, and the manual.

I'm sure that you are excited about receiving your newest version: but please, remember to do the following within a reasonable amount of time. After transferring all of your materials to the disk enclosed please send in any old disks that you may have. Even if you have 3 or 4 etc., please send them in.

DataPak will not be transferring any files so please make sure that all of your materials are transferred by you. The old disks will be stored here for an entirely different reason and none of the materials that may be missed will be able to be retrieved, so please, don't forget.

Do feel free to write and tell us what you think. As you know, we do love to hear from you and are here for any help we may be able to offer. Should you forget, our Technical Support line is (818) 905-2201.

Thank You for being a Valued Customer,

A handwritten signature in cursive script, appearing to read 'JHB', is written over the typed name.

Jill Housley Bramer
Upgrade I/C

IMPORTANT NOTICE!

Per your requests, we have removed our "copy protection".

This means you can make your own backup copies. To do so, use Apple's System disk ("SYS.UTIL"), or the Finder, or any other copier program.

We no longer provide or sell "backup" disks.
Please ignore all references in our literature concerning backup copies.